授業概要 / Class Description	This course will introduce the key theoretical perspectives on fashion and the fashion industry in relation to the contexts in which they emerged and the present. During the course, students will acquire an understanding of these perspectives, how they intersect, and their relevance to the practices and institutions of contemporary fashion and fashion history.
到達目標 / Goal	To understand the key theorists and issues in Fashion Theory, and their relevance and significance to contemporary fashion.
実務経験 / Business Experience	Academic journal editor
授業計画 / Class schedule

回	担当教員	内容
第1回	アダムソン グレゴリー デイル Introduction: Course overview	This class will provide an overview of the key issues and concepts we will be covering, such as what 'theory' means, the fields of fashion, the time of fashion, fashion in the global era, and fashion and the clothed body.
第2回	アダムソン グレゴリー デイル Defining fashion	This class will explore the different meanings and concepts of fashion. We will look at the relationships between fashion and clothing; fashion, gender and ethnicity; fashion and tradition; and fashion and modernity.
第3回	アダムソン グレゴリー デイル The time of fashion	Fashion is always changing, passing from the in time to the out of time. In this class, we will examine the relationship between the past and present of fashion, and how it relates to the social present.
第4回	アダムソン グレゴリー デイル Fashion and the global market	This class will examine the changes that have occurred in clothing and fashion since the time of the Industrial Revolution. We will focus on the shift from craft to industrial production, fashion as a commodity, the role of clothing as a social marker, and the rise of 'western' fashion as a modern aesthetic.
第5回	アダムソン グレゴリー デイル Designer labels	Following the emergence of the first fashion houses in the late nineteenth century, high fashion became increasingly associated with individual designers and their labels. In this class, we will examine the idea of originality and how the designer came to be seen as the driver of change.

第6回	アダムソン グレゴリー デイル Fashion looks	Fashion typically enacts competing desires to conform and to be different. However, the social significance of fitting in and standing out can differ in terms of gender, sexuality, class and ethnicity. This class will introduce the idea of the gaze as a way to understand the social significance of fashion in the world.
第7回	アダムソン グレゴリー デイル Fashion subcultures	This class will draw on subcultural theory to examine the role fashion played in the formation of social and cultural subcultures in the US and Britain in the 1950s and after.
第8回	アダムソン グレゴリー デイル Orienting fashion	In this class, we will explore the idea of Orientalism (which denotes the way the East is represented as Other by the West) by comparing descriptions of the aesthetics of Vivienne Westwood and Rei Kawakubo in fashion literature and the media.
第9回	アダムソン グレゴリー デイル Street style	This class will examine Tokyo street fashion as both a local and global phenomenon, with a focus on transcultural exchange and the social and aesthetic differences between subculture and street style.
第10回	アダムソン グレゴリー デイル Fashion and gender	This class we will examine the relationship between fashion and gender difference, and use the theory of gender performativity to explore how gender difference is not only represented but also contested and transformed through fashion.
第11回	アダムソン グレゴリー デイル The clothed body	This class will explore the significance of the clothed body in the world, with a particular focus on cases when clothing is perceived to be adorning the wrong body.
第12回	アダムソン グレゴリー デイル Fashion and the Internet	In recent years, social media and ecommerce have had enormous impacts on how fashion is dispersed, perceived, produced and distributed. This class will explore how the Internet has changed fashion at both the global and local scales.
第13回	アダムソン グレゴリー デイル Final Student Presentations	Students will present their final projects.
第14回	アダムソン グレゴリー デイル Recap and class discussion	We will the finish the course with a discussion of some of the pertinent issues and themes that have arisen during the course.

授業概要 / Class Description	Beginning by challenging what “media” is in our ever-changing times, this class proposes that beyond conventional magazines and digital social media, the fashion runway, urban space, virtual worlds, and even algorithms are media and should be analyzed from this stance. It then proposes that all means of self-expression, including fashion, actually represents the power structures that govern our world, and that we must understand that in order to craft compelling new stories. At the core of self-expression in media is the concept of interviews, and these will be explored from various perspectives.
到達目標 / Goal	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>- Challenge outdated notions of media and equip students with the skills to grasp media from a theoretical perspective.</li> <li>- Consider the intersecting cultural and power dynamics that inform media and what these forces represent.</li> <li>- A section of each class will introduce interview methodology.</li> </ul>
実務経験 / Business Experience	Over a decade of experience as Fashion Editor for the Japan Times Newspaper and contributor to fashion coverage to various publications. Experience as Tokyo Editor-in-Chief for a global fashion TV network. Appointed Brand Advisor for JTB. Consultant client list includes Isetan Mitsukoshi, Cabinet Office, JETRO, MOFA, JNTO, JTA, Ministry of Environment and other major public and private sector groups.

授業概要 / Class Description

Academic Communication first year students will be utilizing lesson strategies immediately to benefit from the innovative combination of one-on-one, paired and small group interactive role plays. The core and fundamental focus of the class environment is to implement weekly practice sessions geared at clear pronunciation, structured vocabulary building and critical thinking skills. The conducive lessons aim to produce highly motivated students confident enough to express themselves in the English language. The student's active participation and completion of class activities will be an essential part of this course. Activities are designed to give students control in communicative situations, to confirm or clarify what they're saying and what they're hearing, to show interest in and to maintain and develop conversations, to help with fluency and to compensate for a lack of language. All lessons will be taught only in English, by a native instructor. Weekly homework will be assigned online, in a Language Management System (LMS). Depending on the situation, lessons may be conducted online or on campus (face-to-face). The same core curriculum will be maintained in both situations.

到達目標 / Goal

The goal of this class is to help students improve their ability to interact in English spontaneously, without hesitation. Students will acquire a better understanding of what is being said and how to respond, in challenging situations. Students will be exposed to important listening features, unique to English communication, and they will acquire useful speaking strategies, to help them manage everyday situations.
